

Gearing Up for Advocacy:

A Toolkit for ENA State Council Government Affairs Chairs

State Policy and It's Importance to ENA

The efforts of ENA members and other grassroots advocates are critical to the work ENA is doing to advance the principles of Safe Practice, Safe Care to support advancements in the emergency nursing profession. State lawmakers and agency officials have jurisdiction over many laws and regulations regarding issues like: workplace violence, emergency nursing scope of practice, access to mental health and substance abuse treatment services, and emergency department staffing standards.

This toolkit is designed to assist you throughout your term as your State Council's Government Affairs Chairperson. It includes information on your roles and responsibilities, how you can shape ENA's government relations activities, and how to maximize the impact of your state's government relations efforts by energizing and guiding ENA members to advocate on behalf of themselves and their patients.

State Policy Priorities and the ENA Public Policy Agenda

From the start, it is important to recognize that all your government relations efforts should be done in a coordinated manner, in line with the priorities set forth by you and your State Council. The specific priorities should reflect ENA's national priorities, as laid out in the most current Public Policy Agenda (Appendix B), as well as issues specific to your state.

ENA State Policy Priorities

Many efforts to advance ENA's policy goals occur at the state level. Therefore, we recommend you focus your government relations work in your state. Some of ENA's priority issues are as follows:

Working to Reduce Violence Against Emergency Nurses

According to the Department of Labor's Occupational Health and Safety Administration (OSHA), health care workers account for 20 percent of all workplace injuries, yet count for about 50 percent of all victims of workplace violence. Nurses face a level of risk of violence at work not seen by those in the private sector – risks like those faced by paramedics, fire fighters, and police officers. Nearly every state provides enhanced protection from assault to those professions through enhanced charges and penalties in their criminal code. Nurses deserve to be afforded the same protections, yet, only about 60 percent of states currently provide enhanced charges or penalties for assaulting an emergency nurse.

ENA supports legislation that strengthen criminal penalties for assaulting or battering emergency nurses and other health care workers in EDs. Specifically, our goal is to enact laws in all states that make it a felony to assault emergency nurses. To date, about 30 states have enacted similar laws. ENA also supports legislation and regulations to improve the safety of health care facilities and enhance the training of workers to minimize violence in emergency departments.

Opioid Epidemic

The opioid epidemic plaguing the country for the last decade has reached epic proportions, killing more than 33,000 Americans in 2015. While you and your colleagues continue to save the lives of patients with emergent needs related to drug overdose, communities have begun to act to stem the tide of death caused by this recent explosion in opioid use, misuse, and abuse.

In addition to supporting increases in funding to support state and local treatment programs and initiatives, ENA supports the pursuit of policies that allow a full array of proven strategies to combat addiction and support individuals in recovery. This includes easing access to emergency opioid-reversal agents like naloxone so these life-saving drugs can reach those they were intended to help. As of 2018, all states have passed laws allowing increased access to naloxone. Additional efforts are needed to maintain and improve access to treatment and services, such as opposing proposed changes to the Medicaid program which would jeopardize treatment options for millions of Americans. Medicaid is the nation's top payer of substance use treatment services.

Enhance Access and Improve Care for those with Mental Health Needs

The average boarding time of a mental health patient in the ED is 18 hours, compared to 4 hours for all types of patients. As you know, the ED is not the most appropriate setting to deal with these issues, however when other options are either inaccessible or unaffordable, many are left with no choice but to go to a hospital ED.

On average, there are 121 suicides per day in the US. Ninety percent of all victims of suicides suffered from a mental health disorder. Reducing eligibility and funding for Medicaid jeopardizes access to mental health services, endangering care for millions.

Emergency Nursing Scope of Practice

Advanced Practice Registered Nurses (APRNs), such as nurse practitioners and clinical nurse specialists, are highly trained clinicians who are positioned to serve an integral role in emergency health care systems. They have broad knowledge and expertise in their specialty and can manage complex clinical and system issues. Nurses in advanced clinical practice provide comprehensive health assessments and demonstrate a high degree of autonomy and expert skill in the diagnosis and treatment of many complex problems. In the emergency setting, APRNs are uniquely prepared to develop and apply theory, conduct research, educate health care providers and consumers, and develop standards of practice that contribute to the optimum treatment of patients.

Yet, in many states, an APRN's ability to practice to the full extent of their education and training is restricted. Further, some states require licensed APRNs to obtain oversight from a physician to practice to the full scope of their training. Allowing APRNs to practice autonomously in appropriate healthcare settings helps to alleviate strains on systems where affordable primary care providers may be lacking. When patients lack access to affordable primary care, they will often go to the ED instead, where they know they can receive treatment.

Emergency Department Safe Staffing Guidelines

Nothing is more important than the care you provide to your patients. To ensure that this care is timely and high-quality, ENs should benefit from appropriate hospital staffing plans that reflect the unique needs and characteristics of your facility and patient population.

ENA supports policies that will empower nurses in the creation of staffing plans specific to the individual ED. This approach recognizes that many factors determine appropriate staffing numbers, and that flexibility is needed to adapt to the changing needs of the ED and the community at-large.

Appropriations

State Appropriators have a tremendous amount of power in deciding which programs are going to be funded, as well as how much money they will receive. For emergency nurses, this provides opportunities to engage on several priorities, including funding for trauma system development, mental health treatment services, and substance use treatment services.

Trauma Care

Traumatic injury is the leading cause of death for Americans under age 46, and costs the nation around $670 billion in medical expenses and lost productivity annually, according to the National Academies of Science, Engineering and Medicine in a 2016 study. The nation's trauma system is a tapestry of hospitals, providers, and medical transportation suppliers that make up regional systems, with varied results. As many as 30 million people in the United States do not live within an hour of a Level I or II trauma center. The National Academies estimate that as many as 30,000 deaths in 2014 could have been preventable, had care been optimized.

ENA supports programs that will lead to the development of optimally functioning trauma systems, while promoting the importance of increased access to trauma care. ENA also supports policies that will lead to standardized, evidence-based training for providers across the country.

Identifying Your State's Policy Priorities

One step you can take in enhancing your state's government relations program is to develop a policy agenda for your state. A policy agenda is a critical tool used to communicate ENA's priorities to advocates, ENA members, state officials, lawmakers, and other stakeholders. It can be as easy as making a list of 3-5 policy goals that make it clear what priorities your State Council has for a given year or legislative session.

First, consider the policy landscape in your state. For example, if you live in one of the many states where it is a felony to assault an emergency nurse, advocating for a new workplace violence bill to increase the penalties for assaulting emergency nurses might not be an efficient use of your time and efforts. Familiarize yourself with where your state stands on a number of ENA's priorities, such as: workplace violence, nursing practice authority, and funding for trauma centers. General priorities should be established for each legislative session. Keep in mind that often, your priorities might shift or be influenced by other developments that can open-up new opportunities for engagement that you may not have identified specifically. Being flexible will help you capitalize on opportunities when they arise.

Why is Bill Tracking Important?

Success in implementing your state policy agenda depends on being informed. Staying on top of the progress of the legislation your State Council supports or opposes is a critical function of the Government Affairs Chair position. The sponsors and cosponsors of legislation you support is your starting point for developing champions for future efforts. Tracking a bill's progress through committee can help you identify lawmakers who are important targets for relationship development. For instance, if you know a bill you support is scheduled for a hearing in a committee, you (or other ENA members) might seek to schedule meetings with members of the committee who may not have declared support for the bill to inform them of ENA's support for the issue. You may also use this information to reach out to the committee to potentially speak as a witness or file written testimony on behalf of ENA for consideration by the committee prior to a vote.

Which Bills Should I be Tracking?

After you have established your priorities for the year, the next step is identifying bills that you can support, oppose, or seek to have introduced. Since there might be multiple bills that accomplish your priority, choosing a specific bill to support can be tricky. The best place to start is with any bills you supported that did not become law during the previous session. You will want to reach out to their sponsors to gauge their intent for the legislation in the next session. Remember, some states will require that bills be reintroduced after each legislative session. The specific bill number will change when a bill is reintroduced.

Regardless of what bills you end up supporting or opposing, these tips may help narrow it down:

- ✓ Review the most current ENA Public Policy Agenda for potential ideas for legislation as a starting point
- ✓ Seek legislation that accomplishes your policy priority but is simple in nature, avoiding complicated legislation that provides many opportunities for failure
- ✓ Work with like-minded groups or coalition partners to help you identify specific bills to track
- ✓ Be on the lookout for bills that might be harmful to emergency nurses or the patients you serve, you will want to flag these for tracking as well
- ✓ Keep in mind that some bills may not be directly related to your priorities but may present opportunities for engagement, such as legislation that establishes a task force on trauma care, or a bill that would enter the state into the APRN Compact

Once you identify a bill you would like to support or oppose, please notify the ENA Government Relations Team at gov@ena.org. Once notified, ENA Government Relations will begin tracking the legislation's progress and provide regular updates on the bill's status. We can also provide strategic and technical support, including assistance drafting materials in support or opposition to legislation.

Get to Know Your State Government

Each state has a popularly-elected governor, who serves as the chief executive officer for the state. Governors are responsible for overseeing the implementation of state laws as well as the state's executive branch. Governors also make many appointments within state agencies, boards, task forces, etc., including the leadership of each state agency. In a legislative role, governors work with the state legislature to pass laws and confirm appointees, but also have the authority to veto bills passed by the legislature.

State agencies, such as departments of public health, mental health, boards of nursing, etc. will have authority over policies and programs affecting emergency nurses and your patients.

Forty-nine of fifty states have a bicameral legislature, which includes an upper chamber (Senate) and a lower chamber (often either House of Representatives or Assembly). Nebraska, with its unicameral legislature, serves as the exception. You (and your State Council) should familiarize yourself with your state's legislative leadership, including Speaker of the House, Majority and Minority Leaders in both chambers, President of the Senate, President Pro Tempore of the Senate, etc. It is also important to know who holds positions of leadership (Chair and Vice Chair/ Ranking Member) on relevant committees that drive your legislative agenda including, but not limited to: Health, Judiciary, Appropriations, and Budget (specific names of legislative committees will vary by state).

- ✓ Start in your own backyard – Learn more about your own State Representatives/Delegates and Senators, and engage with them.

Legislative Session Dates & Deadlines

Unlike the U.S. Congress, most state legislatures are not in session year-round. Although specific lengths may vary by state, many state legislative sessions begin in January and end in late spring, usually in April, May or June. Some state legislatures, such as New York and Illinois, meet virtually year-round. Others, however, such as Nevada, Texas and Montana, may only meet every other year.

Many states require a bill be reintroduced during each session of the legislature, but about half allow for carryover of bills. Carryover occurs when states do not require a bill be reintroduced each year of a given legislative session. About half of all states practice carryover. Pre-filing is a practice in many (but not all) states whereby a member of the legislature indicates an intent to file a bill on a certain topic. A pre-filing deadline is the date by which this must be done, before the beginning of a session, usually between October and January. Consult your state legislature’s website for more information. The filing deadline is the date by which the bill must be introduced to be eligible to be considered during the current session. These will vary state-to-state unless the state has no filing deadline. Finally, some states limit the number of bills a legislator may introduce in each session. Regardless of how your state handles prefiling, filing, or filing limits, it is especially important to reach out to your champions (the sponsors of your bills) in the months leading up to the end of the session, especially if your bill will need to be reintroduced.

States also commonly hold what are known as “special” sessions of the legislature, where they convene outside the normal session schedule to act on specific business. Special sessions may last anywhere from a few days to a few months.

It is important for you to know the important dates in your state’s legislative session – including when the session begins and ends as well as any legislative deadlines your state may have.

Information about legislative sessions around the country can be found at the National Council of State Legislatures website at www.NCSL.org, under “Legislators and Staff” by clicking on “Legislative Session Calendar” under “Tools.” This will change periodically throughout the year, as the sessions evolve in each state.

Explore Legislative Resources

As a Government Affairs Chair, you should visit and familiarize yourself with your state legislature's website, which is a great source of information regarding legislation and state policy. There, you will find information that will assist you in researching bills or getting to know your state representation, such as:

- ✓ Contact information for state legislators, including biographies, office locations, and staff. Some may even offer complete rosters for the entire legislature for download;
- ✓ Updated legislative calendar information while the legislature is in session;
- ✓ Committee information, including hearings and other meetings; and
- ✓ Bill Tracking that provides alerts about specific pieces of legislation and/or committee activity. Many states offer such a feature on their website.

More About the Legislative Process

For policy priorities that are lucky enough to have an identified champion in the legislature who introduces a related bill, the process moving forward is fairly straightforward, although not always easily realized.

We will note that every state is different, and the process described below is a general outline. You should consult with your state legislature's website for more information about the processes and rules for your state.

For the process to begin, a bill must first be introduced by a member of the state legislature in either the House or Senate. Bills are typically drafted by permanent staff of the legislature, after being given a concept or idea from a member of the legislature. After being introduced, the bill is assigned to one or more standing committees, based on the subject matter of the legislation. The chair of the committee, can choose to call a special hearing specifically for the bill or may include the bill on a roster of other legislation to be considered during a hearing already scheduled. The chair may also choose to do nothing with the bill, effectively killing it. During hearings, members of the committee hear testimony, ask questions and read statements in support or opposition to the bill. Depending on the state, committee members may have a chance to offer amendments to the bill as well.

If the committee votes to send the bill to the full chamber, the bill moves under the leader of that chamber (typically House or Senate), who may choose to allow a full chamber vote on the bill. If the bill is brought to the full chamber for a vote, members may have the opportunity to speak about the bill, offer amendments, and vote up or down on the legislation.

Once a bill clears the first chamber, it heads over to the other chamber for consideration. To become law, both chambers must pass identical versions of the same bill. If the other chamber amends or otherwise changes the bill, it must return and be approved by the original chamber. The final version, approved by both chambers, can then be sent to the governor for a signature.

Keep in mind, many states also have cross-over deadlines which should be noted. A cross-over deadline is the date by which a bill must be passed in at least one chamber before it can be considered by the other.

Engaging with State Lawmakers

As an organization, it is important to establish relationships with state legislators, to maximize your effectiveness as advocates. The goal is to be a go-to person for that lawmaker on all issues related to emergency nursing. As an emergency nurse, you can serve as a source of information and expertise on key policy issues.

Here are a few examples of how you and your membership can engage with state lawmakers:

- ✓ Invite your state legislators to tour your ED (if appropriate and in accordance with your employer's policies). This can provide them with a firsthand look at your facility and help sway them to support policies favorable to emergency nurses. When possible, work with your coalition and community partners to develop an informative program for their visit.
- ✓ Request to meet with state legislators while they are at home in their districts. Typically, state lawmakers are more accessible than Members of Congress, especially when out of session and back in their districts, which is more likely to be close to where you and your members live. Be mindful of the state legislative calendar, especially for year-round legislatures, and request time when you know the legislator is scheduled to be on recess. Most lawmakers will also be home during the weekends and holidays, and often will plan events in the district in which constituents are encouraged to attend.
- ✓ Join your lawmaker's mailing list. Many state lawmakers will have email lists you can join to learn more about their priorities, as well as events the member is holding in their district. Town halls and other community events are a great opportunity to voice concerns about your policy priorities and cultivate positive relationships with lawmakers and their staff.
- ✓ Communicate regularly with the legislator or their staff. If you prepare a regular update for the State Council, Board of Directors, or your membership about state government affairs activities, consider including your legislators and their staff in those emails as well.

Engaging with the Governor & Their Staff

Reaching out to communicate with the governor and members of their staff will potentially allow you to educate the most powerful people in your state on the importance of emergency nursing as well as the policy priorities of ENs in your state. These interactions also serve as an opportunity for you to learn more about the governor's priorities on issues related to emergency care and the practice of emergency nursing in your state. If your priorities align with theirs you can begin to work with the administration to move those ideas forward. If they do not align, you might inform them how some policies will negatively affect your ability to provide emergency care to patients in need.

Establishing a rapport with your governor's lead health policy staffer can be a very important first step. They can be a wealth of information on upcoming movement in policy areas of the state, and often have the ear of key administration staff, as well as the governor. Administrations are normally very busy during a legislative session and will typically plan for the next legislative session soon after the previous one ends. Request a meeting soon after the end of a session to improve your chances of receiving a meeting. This could also be a time where they are more receptive to advancing your agenda as well.

Connect with State Agencies

Establishing connections within various state agencies that deal with emergency care and nursing policies can be some of the most valuable contacts you make in state government. These career professionals implement new laws, which often leave out many of the details associated with changing policy or enacting a new program. Meeting with these individuals to discuss how the implementation of new laws can affect emergency nurses serves as an opportunity to influence how these policies are enacted.

Many state agencies seek out professional groups like ENA as partners in the implementation of new laws. Also, meeting regularly with these offices can establish ENA as a trusted and valuable resource, which can open doors to participation in statewide meetings, task forces, and advisory councils – which can have a positive impact on the profile of ENA and its members. Request meetings with appropriate staff for the specific issues you are working on anytime throughout the year. Consider inviting agency staff to member-attended meetings of the State Council.

Examples of some state agencies and committees you might be familiar with:

- ✓ Department of Health and Human Services
- ✓ State Board of Nursing
- ✓ State Trauma Care Committee (often have representatives from nursing)

- ✓ Department of Labor – Office of Occupational Safety and Health
- ✓ Office of Emergency Services (or other Emergency Management Agency)

Identify & Build Coalitions

Influencing the development and implementation of public policy requires the ability to work with other organizations, key stakeholders in your community and around the state who share policy goals with ENA. This may include other nursing groups, emergency physician organizations, injury prevention advocates and patient advocate organizations. Joining or forming coalitions with these partners can lead to valuable contacts and relationships that can pay big dividends when pushing for your policy agenda.

Coalitions allow disparate groups to come together informally to advance one or more policy goals. This allows for coordinated efforts that allow the individual groups to leverage the resources of all to advance their policy forward. Coalitions can be whatever the group envisions – formal or informal, permanent or temporary – it's up to you.

- ✓ Contact other local groups that have natural intersections regarding policy priorities
- ✓ Find and join other state/local coalitions working on issues like workplace violence, the opioid epidemic, advance practice issues, safe patient handling, injury prevention, etc.
- ✓ Think outside the box!

Engage Your Members in Advocacy

One of the most important things you can do as a Government Affairs Chair is to energize your state's ENA members to become stronger advocates for issues affecting emergency nurses. Many ENA State Councils have formed Government Affairs Committees, with the Government Affairs Chair acting as liaison to the State Council. If you do not have a Government Affairs Committee, consider forming one, seeking members that represent different parts of your state.

Have regular contact with all ENA members in your state, informing them of the organization's priorities and how ENA's activities in the state can lead to positive change!

Some things to keep in mind about engaging with your state's ENA members:

- ✓ The Government Affairs Chair should have regular interaction with membership
- ✓ Encourage members to join the EN411 Action Network to receive: Action Alerts, Washington Update, and other announcements

- ✓ Push out Action Alerts to all your members when you receive them
- ✓ Encourage members to attend Day on the Hill to engage in grassroots advocacy at the federal level
- ✓ Mentor other members to become Government Affairs Chairs
- ✓ Encourage all members to update their account information, especially their preferred email, on their ENA member profile online – many ENA members use their work emails, which often blocks ENA emails due to their robust firewalls

ENA Government Relations Team

ENA's Government Relations Team, based in Washington, D.C. can serve as a resource for you as you develop and implement a government affairs program in your state. The types of technical and strategic support we can provide includes:

- ✓ Reviewing and tracking legislation
- ✓ Drafting and editing letters of support, written and oral testimony, and other materials
- ✓ Providing strategic advice and support regarding the movement of legislation
- ✓ Assistance connecting with state lawmakers
- ✓ Support for meetings with lawmakers, agencies, and other key stakeholders.

Please contact ENA Director of Government Relations, Rob Kramer (rob.kramer@ena.org), to request assistance.

Appendix A: Glossary of Terms

Bicameral	Referring to a legislative body in a state that has two chambers, usually a House of Representatives/ General Assembly and a Senate. Forty-Nine states have bi-cameral legislatures.
Carryover	In state legislatures, referring to the practice where bills are held over from one year of a legislative session to the next. Bills do not have to be reintroduced in carryover years.
Chair of Committee	The highest-ranking member of a committee, who controls the agenda and direction of that committee. Committee chairs are almost always members of the majority party of the chamber.
Coalition	An alliance of distinct parties, persons, or organizations for joint action.
Cosponsor	A member of the legislature who has publicly signed-on in support of a bill.
Cross-Over Deadline	In bicameral legislatures, the date by which a bill must have passed one chamber in order to be eligible to be considered in the other chamber.
Filing Deadline	The date by which all bills must be filed to be eligible for consideration in the current legislative session.
Medicaid	Public health insurance program that provides coverage to eligible individuals, including low-income adults, children, pregnant women, elderly adults and people with disabilities. Medicaid is administered by the states, under established federal guidelines. The program is funded jointly by the states and federal government. Medicaid is the nation's number one payor of mental health and substance abuse treatment services.
Pre-Filing Deadline	The date by which bills that are being filed before the start of a legislative session must be submitted to be eligible for consideration.

- Public Policy Agenda Written document that identifies key policy priorities for ENA State Councils. Should be utilized by Government Affairs Chairs as well as ENA members to reference basic information on these priorities.
- Ranking Member The highest-ranking member of a committee from the minority party in control of that legislative chamber.
- Special Session A special meeting of the legislature, called by the governor of the legislature itself and limited to specific matters.
- Sponsor Member of the legislature who introduces a specific bill.
- Standing Committee A committee appointed with continuing jurisdiction over general policy issues or areas of legislative activity.
- State Agencies Offices and departments that comprise the executive and administrative branch of state government, reporting to the governor. State agencies are tasked with implementing new laws affecting programs and policies under their jurisdiction, as well as developing and maintaining government programs and services provided at the state level.
- Unicameral Referring to a legislative body in a state that has one chamber. Nebraska is the only state with a unicameral legislature.

Appendix B: ENA Government Affairs State Council Chairperson Role and Responsibilities

The role of the Government Affairs Chairperson includes developing relationships with legislators and staff and maintaining government relations activities.

Responsibilities and activities may include:

1. Maintain communication about government relations activity by:
 - Informing ENA state council and chapter leaders and members within their state with legislative updates of pertinent legislation within the state legislature
 - Encouraging other ENA members to sign-up for the EN411 Legislative Network and become engaged in public policy discussions
 - Contribute to the ENA database of key contacts, such as federal elected officials

2. Effectively advocate on behalf of ENA's public policy priorities by:
 - Taking action on assigned action alerts
 - Calling legislator offices on timely issues
 - Attending in-district legislator events, such as town hall meetings
 - Providing feedback on all activities to the Government Relations team
 - Participating in ENA Day on the Hill

3. Participation in Government Affairs Chairpersons quarterly conference calls

Qualifications:

- Current ENA membership
- Current registered nurse licensure
- Demonstrates leadership through involvement in chapter, state council or National ENA projects, committees, or programs

The following outlines various attributes this role should encompass:

- Demonstrates leadership skills
- Have dedicated interest in government relations matters
- Understanding of basic legislative and regulatory processes
- Ability to develop relationships with legislators and their staff
- Communicate effectively with ENA membership within the state
- A two-year term is recommended for this position

Appendix C: ENA Public Policy Agenda for 2016/2017

I. Safety in the Emergency Care Environment

Reduce Violence Against Emergency Nurses

Violence in emergency departments has reached epidemic levels and emergency nurses are particularly vulnerable. The 24-hour accessibility of the emergency department, the lack of adequately trained, armed or visible security guards, and an overall stressful environment are among the chief reasons why emergency nurses are victims of violence at such a high rate.

The Emergency Nurses Association (ENA) will continue to advocate for laws that strengthen the criminal penalties for assaulting or battering emergency nurses and other health care workers in emergency departments.

Reduce Workplace Injury

Nurses are at risk of harm from the environment in which they work. Factors influencing this situation include ergonomic injuries, needle stick injuries, increasing morbid obesity levels, and an aging workforce.

ENA will support federal legislation and programs aimed at reducing workplace injuries and illnesses for health care personnel and patients, while improving the safety of patient care delivery.

Establish Safe Emergency Department Staffing Guidelines

Maintaining the appropriate level of emergency nurse staff is critical to the ability of emergency departments to provide quality healthcare for patients.

As such, ENA supports policies that empower nurses to create appropriate staffing plans specific to each emergency department. This approach recognizes the many factors that determine the appropriate level of staffing, as well as the flexibility needed to account for changing circumstances in emergency departments.

II. Nursing Education and Practice

Increase Funding for Nursing Education and Training

ENA urges Congress to increase its investment to alleviate the growing nursing shortage that is impacting every aspect of the U.S. healthcare system and negatively affecting patient care.

ENA will support legislation that reauthorizes and funds the Nursing Workforce Development programs under Title VIII of the Public Health Service Act. The Title VIII programs provide the main federal funding for nursing education, practice, and retention.

Protect and Recognize Emergency Nursing Scope of Practice

ENA will support public policies that remove restriction on the role and scope of practice of RNs and advance practice registered nurses (APRNs) in appropriate healthcare settings.

ENA will support legislation that allows APRNs to practice autonomously, and independently prescribe medication, and oppose restrictions on administering procedural sedation medications by qualified emergency department nurses. In addition, ENA will support legislation that recognizes APRNs as full practice providers in the Veterans Administration's health care system.

III. Quality and Timely Access to Emergency Care

Support Programs to Enhance Access and Improve Care for Mental Health Patients

ENA will support federal government initiatives aimed at enhancing access and improving care for mental health patients. Further, ENA supports policies that alleviate the holding or boarding of such patients in the emergency department.

ENA will support comprehensive mental health reform legislation, including bills that improve Medicare and Medicaid reimbursement for mental health services and enhance community-based resources for the mentally ill.

Increase support for trauma systems and trauma centers

Trauma is the leading cause of death for people ages 1-44, and 35 million people are treated for traumatic injuries every year. Nevertheless, more than 45 million people lack access within one hour to a trauma center able to treat severe traumatic injuries.

ENA will continue to fight for legislation and funding to improve the trauma care in the U.S. This includes both the development of optimally functioning trauma systems and quick access to state-of-the-art trauma centers.

Maintain funding for poison control centers

According to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, more than 40,000 people die annually from poisoning and approximately 2,000 are treated each day in emergency departments.

ENA will support programs and funding that provide resources for the nation's 56 poison control centers.

Improve treatment of patients who abuse prescription opioids and heroin

The U.S. is experiencing a historic epidemic in opioids and heroin abuse. In 2014, drug overdoses were the leading cause of accidental death in the U.S.

ENA will support comprehensive legislation to combat the ongoing national crisis of addiction to opioid drugs, including provisions to encourage states and local communities to pursue a full array of proven strategies to combat addiction and support individuals in recovery.

Fund Research to Improve the Delivery of Emergency Care

ENA will continue to strive for improved patient safety and enhanced quality of care by collaborating with appropriate stakeholders to promote and conduct research to enhance emergency care for all patients.

ENA was a strong advocate of the establishment in 2012 of the Office of Emergency Care Research (OECR) at the National Institutes of Health. The Office is a focal point for basic and clinical research on emergency care across NIH. ENA will continue to support the research initiatives and innovations fostered by OECR.

In addition, ENA will support the work of the National Institute of Nursing Research (NINR) at the National Institutes of Health and urges adequate federal funding for NINR within the overall NIH budget.

Continue and expand federal research and support for pediatric emergency care

ENA will strongly support policies that will enhance emergency medical services for children. As such, ENA urges Congress to continue to support the Emergency Medical Services for Children (EMSC) program at the Health Resources and Service Administration. EMSC, which has provided funds to every state, is the only federal program dedicated to improving emergency care for children.

ENA will support legislation that reauthorizes and provides adequate federal funding for the EMSC program.

Appendix D: Instructions for Requesting a Meeting with Your Legislators

When requesting a meeting with your Representative/Senator, if they ask you to submit your request in writing, via email or fax, please feel free to use the language below as your template.

The language below is also useful when speaking with the Representative's/Senator's staff. When on the phone, remember to make clear that you are a constituent of the Representative/Senator and give specific time windows that you are available to meet. Feel free to modify this template based on your conversation with the lawmaker's office.

Due to the lengthy security process involved with the screening of regular mail sent to Representative's/Senator's offices, please email or fax all written requests for meetings. Do not use regular mail.

Template for Written Meeting Requests

Dear [Name of Staff Member/ Representative/ Senator]:

As a constituent and emergency nurse living in [City/State], I am writing to respectfully request a meeting with [Representative/Senator Last Name] to discuss issues of importance to me and emergency nurses across [name of State]. I will be in [State Capitol] and available to meet in your office on [Date] at [insert time]. Specifically, I would like to discuss healthcare issues and legislation that directly impact emergency nurses and the care received by patients. If [Representative/Senator Last Name] is unavailable to meet, I would be pleased to meet with the staffer handling healthcare issues. I look forward to hearing back from you. Thank you for your time and attention to my request.

Sincerely,

[Your Name]

[Address]

[Phone Number]

Appendix E: Sample Letter of Support for State Legislation

Below is sample language you can use as a template for drafting letters of support for a specific bill or initiative in your state. While the subject matter of your letter may vary, we would ask that you follow the general structure of the letter provided, to include the following:

- Salutation including the number of ENA members in your state, the purpose of the letter, and what the bill/initiative you are supporting/opposing would do;
- Paragraph that lays out the landscape for emergency nurses currently, with regards to the particular issue at hand;
- One or two paragraphs that support your position using data and statistics (when available);
- One short paragraph that relays the purpose of the legislation/initiative; and

Dear Representative/ Senator Smith,

On behalf of the Emergency Nurses Association (ENA) and our more than 43,000 members worldwide, including nearly [Number of ENA Members in Your State] members in [Name of State], I am writing to express our support for House/ Senate Bill XXXX. This legislation strengthens the penalty for assault and battery on emergency nurses and other health care professionals. In so doing, this bill would help address the elevated risk of violence faced by emergency nurses and other health care professionals across South Carolina by increasing the penalties for assaulting such individuals.

As you know, under federal law, EDs are required to treat any patient seeking care without regard to insurance status or ability to pay. However, this duty should not be accepted at the expense of the safety of patients receiving treatment and professionals who are providing it. Every day, emergency nurses across the country are punched, bitten, spit on, slapped, grabbed, kicked, and sometimes worse, yet rarely are these assaults reported. On average, health care professionals in the ED experience a violent event every two months, and registered nurses in the ED are more likely to experience acute stress, according to the American Journal of Emergency Medicine.

Emergency nurses and other personnel in the ED experience violence at much higher rates than other workers. The Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) found that between 2002 and 2013, incidents of serious workplace violence were four times more common for health care workers than other private sector workers.

In a 2016 report, the Government Accountability Office identified workplace violence as a “serious concern” in health care, and it is critical that those who face a substantial risk of violence, like emergency nurses, are adequately protected under the law. Your legislation will help ensure that violence against emergency nurses and other health care professionals is not ignored. We must protect those who dedicate themselves to saving lives in our communities every day.

Thank you for your leadership on this important legislation that will help protect health care professionals, including emergency nurses.

Signed,

Jane Doe
